LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

John's Mother.

John's mother made no reply. He strode by her and up the stairway. Not knowing exactly what to do, I stood still in the hallway, which I noticed in spite of my confusion was very elegant and ornate in an "interior decorated" sort of way.

Madame Gordon made an attempt to follow him. For the moment he had forgotten me. This one-track mind seems characteristic of the family. As John reached the top of the stairs he called:

"Come on up, Kate," and then seeing his mother close behind him, said: "You needn't come, mother, I can do all that's necessary now."

He threw open the door of what I recognized as a man's sitting room, for I had followed weekly up the stairs behind my mother-in-law rather than stand alone in the lower hall. Any man might have inhabited this room. It was a masculine place, but surely there was nothing of John Gordon in the room. When I felt the depression that wholesale decorating always creates in me, I thought of my dear old father's room at home. In my mind's eye I could see his wheel chair drawn beside the low table, on wheels also, where he could easily reach his favorite books. I recollected the old-fashioned steel engravings on the wall and the colonial furniture that had come to him from four generations back.

It has been said that houses grow to resemble their owners, but by no stretch of the imagination could the house I entered be made to look like either John or his mother. Madame Gordon was quite as handsome and impressive in her way as John, but the impression she gave me then was of great coldness and self-sufficiency.

She had not spoken to me since I came in and never since I have known her has she permitted me to feel as other than an interloper in the family.

I felt myself choking, but I was determined that the tears which were very near my eyelids should not fall. They were burned up, however, at Madame Gordon's question: "What are you going to do about Bessie?"

It seemed to me that John hesitated a moment. I did not dare to look up to catch the expression of his face. Then I heard him exclaim impatiently: "Good heavens, mother, what on earth are you talking about? Why should I do anything about Bessie? What do you mean?"

Madame Gordon did not answer, except to say: "She is visiting your sister now," and turning, she left the room with great dignity.

She had done exactly what she wanted to do—she had placed an arrow of curious jealousy in my heart. Who was Bessie?

Then and there I decided that I should live in this house with that woman no longer than was positively necessary. I went up to John and put my arms around his neck and begged: "Take me away, dear, take me away. Your mother does not want me. She will never be happy with me, and in the end she will make us both unhappy. I cannot bear to be the bone of contention between you. It is not right, dear, that you should make me the cause of friction. Take me away, please take me away!"

This had the directly opposite effect on John than I intended, but I will give him credit for thinking that in doing what he did he was vindicating my position.

He put his arms about me and kissed me very gently, even while saying:

ing in a voice that was almost harsh with decision:

"My dear, we will stay in this house, and it shall be made comfortable and pleasant for you. Anyone living here who cannot conform to your wishes will have to leave."

"Oh John! John! I don't want to make trouble between you and your mother."

"Nonsense, child, the matter'll get over it. We've had these kind of jam-bores ever since I was a kid and she always comes around in the end. You see, mother knew she couldn't live with Alice. They are too much alike. Neither one of them has an unselfish hair in her head. Mother'll come around when she gets it into that beautiful white head of hers that it is for her interest to do so."

Alas, Madame Gordon never came to the conclusion that it was for her interest to be nice to me. She soon made John feel that she bowed to his ultimatum because she loved him; and because she loved him so much, she never could quite be satisfied with me or anyone as his wife.

As John opened his bedroom door I slipped in and he said: "You won't mind if I leave you here for a few moments, will you? I might as well settle this matter now."

I shook my head, and oh, the sensation of relief I had when he closed the door. I threw myself upon his bed to sob my heart out. I had never thought marriage would be like this.

A RIVER DEEPER THAN THE OCEAN

Did you ever hear of a "suboceanic canyon"? The Hudson river is said to be such a thing. Its bed—worn by the flowing stream—is considerably deeper than the offshore part of the Atlantic.

Another such canyon is the channel of the St. Lawrence. Yet another is that of the Congo. Both are deeper than the ocean near their mouths.

The Hudson, with the great bay into which it flows, is a "drowned river." That is to say, it is flooded by an intruding ocean. The bay and lower river compose what would be called in Norway a fiord.

The Delaware is another drowned river. Chesapeake bay is another. Long Island Sound is yet another. Why should these rivers be drowned? What has happened to them? To these questions geologists give this answer:

The whole east coast of the United States has sunk a good deal in the course of ages, owing to the enormous weight of material brought down by the river and deposited out in the ocean off shore. But geologists are inclined to think that the melting of glaciers has largely to do with the phenomenon.

Once upon a time a river separated England from France. The rise of the ocean drowned it, and today it is called the British Channel. Another river ran between England and Ireland; it was likewise drowned.

The British Channel, by the way, is a suboceanic canyon, its bottom deeper than the ocean nearby, outside.

Too much salt water. The whole eastern edge of the United States is overflooded. If you were to put on a diving suit and walk on the bottom of the sea you would have to travel from Philadelphia seventy miles eastward before arriving at the true edge of the continent, where you would find a steep declivity descending to the floor of the ocean, which has a normal depth of two and a half miles.

MRS. HENNESSY SAYS IT'S GRAND

"I'm Always Going to Keep a Bottle of Tanlac in My House," She Says.

"This Tanlac is the grandest medicine I have ever seen or heard of," was the statement made by Mrs. Elith Hennessy of 105 Harrison street, Seattle, Wash., when she called at Bartlett's Drug Store a few days ago.

"Tanlac has entirely overcome my troubles and built me up in every way possible. I am suffering no more, but am enjoying life, and want to recommend Tanlac to everybody," continued Mrs. Hennessy.

In speaking of her condition before taking Tanlac she said: "I suffered such awful pains in my stomach that I didn't know what it was to have a pleasant day. I was dreadfully nervous and restless, and my constitution and whole system were run down and weakened. I was so nauseated and felt so dizzy that I was simply miserable all the time."

"You may not believe it," she continued, "but I actually lost fifteen pounds in three weeks, an average of five pounds a week. I had no appetite whatever and what I did eat did not agree with me. My food wouldn't digest and that caused me to have sour stomach. Gas would form on my stomach and would bloat me up and press against my lungs so I could hardly get my breath. I was also constipated and frequently had splitting headaches."

"I read in the papers where Tanlac had given such wonderful results in a case that nearly described mine—so I decided to try it. And to my complete surprise I began to get better at once, and now I feel like another woman. I have taken three bottles of Tanlac and have been entirely restored to health and I can now enjoy life. My nerves are calm and I have no pains whatever in my stomach. I have forgotten how it feels to have a headache or dizzy spell. I started to gain in weight at once and am gaining all the time. My appetite is better than ever and I can hardly get enough to eat. My husband says he is afraid I will eat him out of house and home. I am now enjoying a good night's sleep every night, and I will always keep Tanlac in my home."

Tanlac is sold in A. R. McIntyre's Two Busy Stores—Advertisement.

WITH OURSELVES

Someone has termed the modern home a service station where we pause for a little while now and then to stoke up and get our wearying apparel freshened a bit before rushing on once more in the wild search for amusement or money. The simile is all too true in many cases. Some of us have lost the real home feeling—the love and the loyalty which make that place, though its furnishings may be meager in comparison, the dearest place in all the world, because there are those who are bound by closest ties and whose love and understanding of our needs are always evident. Nothing can take the place of this feeling. We can have congenial friends, we can form new ties, but we shall have lost some of life's richest joys if the love of home is not known to us.

Sometimes we realize this too late, when by our own lack of loyalty, honesty or care we have severed the ties that have been severed. One cannot retrace steps in the path of life, however much they may be wished. Exactly the same conditions never return. Severed faith and love are two of the joys hardest to replace. We can grope and search and mourn all to no avail. It's well to remember this when we are starting out with youth and the love of youthful adventure and novelty strong within us. It's well for those of us who are older to try to keep the home spirit in our children. It's worth all the effort our patience and sacrifice we can muster to our aid. It's worth careful

VIOLENT ALIENS TO BE DEPORTED FROM COUNTRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Deportation proceedings have been instituted in a number of cities to rid the country of the violent radicals caught in the nation-wide raids which have been in progress since Friday, Attorney General Palmer announced tonight.

Instructions have gone to all department of justice agents, the attorney general said, to permit no delay in instituting formal hearings, preliminary to their actual deportation. Assurances have been received from other government departments having to do with deportations that action would be taken to expedite the cases.

In the meantime the cleanup of the country will continue, Mr. Palmer said in announcing tonight that there must be no "letup." The total number actually held on deportation warrants had reached 331 tonight, while from some cities in which radical leaders were picked up reports had not reached the department.

Efforts of the department representatives, it was said, are being directed more particularly at the Union of Russian Workers. This organization, branded by the attorney general as the most dangerous anarchistic group in the country, was said to have wide ramifications, with the department agents still uncovering new evidences of its activities.

Opinion at the department of justice as expressed today, seems to be that the Russian union perhaps was constituting itself a self-appointed leader of all organizations which are preaching overthrow of the government.

Literature seized was said to show that the organization accepts support from almost any source, so long as it was working to defeat authority and destroy private property rights. Officials said they had evidence showing that leaders of the union had made overtures to other and lesser groups of radicals to join their organization, holding out promises of rewards when state and society are overthrown.

Because they are regarded as the most dangerous of all radical types those arrested in the recent raids are being held in $10,000 bail, officials said. Peter Blanski and Adolph Schabel, both former secretaries of the Union of Russian Workers, have been held in bail of $15,000.

planning and occasional inconvenience and wise blindness now and then.

What the world needs today is more homes. Not those which are only such in name but those which are a haven and an inspiration to all who enter.

LIVESTOCK SHOW IS TO BE EXHIBIT OF STRICT MERIT

The value of any exhibition—be it of china and cut glass, automobiles and motorcycles, or livestock, anything—rests upon the one question of merit. The interests back of next month's Ogden Livestock Show took the bull by the horns early by instituting upon this quality in the highest possible manner at their big exhibition, to be staged on January 8, 9 and 10 at the Union Stockyards, Ogden, Utah. They also made it impossible for any but entries of the highest merit to enter the show by inserting a rule entitled "Exhibits must have merit" in the bylaws and rules for the big event. This section reads as follows:

"It will always be the policy of this Show to permit the exhibition only of such animals as have breeding quality and finish to commend them. Animals even of registered breeding may lack such development and finish as would make them creditable to the breed they represent. This class of animals has no place in an exhibition of this kind and are discreditable to the exhibitor and the Show alike. Under this regulation animals pronounced unfit for exhibition by the committee will be disqualified from exhibition and the secretary is required to see that they are removed from the exhibition buildings. Exhibitors are requested to use judgment and care in entering their animals so as to make it unnecessary to enforce this rule."

This paragraph, which will be rigidly adhered to, was made necessary by results of similar shows elsewhere; for everyone who has attended a livestock show to any extent has seen shaggy entrants in the stalls—animals which plainly showed lack of care; they have even seen them led before the judges. They are always turned down and not considered. But the incident makes an unpleasant impression, and a bad feeling in the mind of

YOU buy bread, of course. No up-to-date woman bakes any more. That form of household slavery went out of style with hoop-skirts and the spinning wheel, and the "woman's place is home" nonsense.

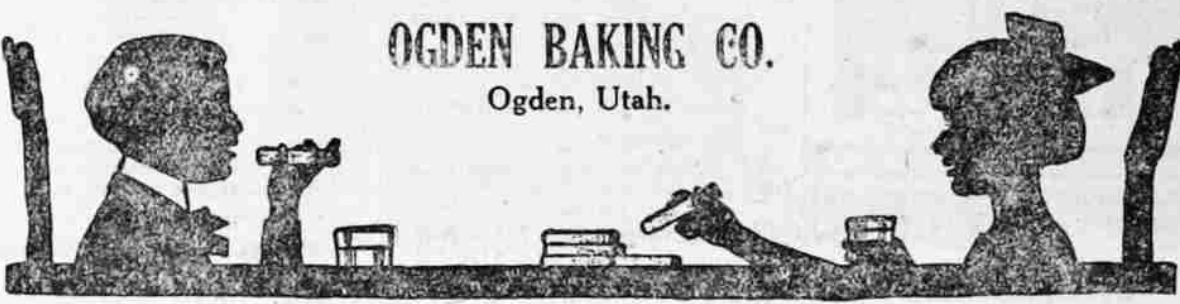

If you know any woman who bakes, for pity's sake preach the gospel of woman's emancipation, and help her grow.

She isn't helping herself or her husband or her family. She is just taking up room in the kitchen and going to seed. Tell her she is wasting money and wasting youth. Then send her to her nearest good grocer's for a loaf of

AMERICAN-MAID BREAD

"American-Maid" is the new delicious bread that has won its way into the American Home, through sheer merit alone. It is made of the best wheat flour (no substitutes) and has a flavor that is even superior to bread of pre-war days.

The golden brown bloom of the loaf, as it comes from the wrapper, is most appealing, and the creamy, white, smooth texture of its interior will win you on the spot. Try a loaf today! Slices smoothly—toasts perfectly.

Reorganization Of Troop No. 1 Of Boy Scouts

Scout Commissioner Goates has announced that old Troop No. 1 of the Boy Scouts of America has been reorganized under the leadership of Scoutmaster Parley Norseth.

Norseth was forced to discontinue his affiliation with the organization on his enlistment in the navy and he is welcomed by the boys who were forced to discontinue their work.

Troop 1 will have headquarters in the basement of the Eighth ward meeting house and the athletic activities will be carried on in the gymnasium of the Mound Fort school.
